WEDNESDAY MORNING, DECEM'R. 29, 1858

HUNTING IN THE ALLEGHANIES OF MARYLAND.

From a graphic description of a hunt in the Alleghany-mountain range of Maryland, and of the glorious scenery of that portion of the State known as the Alpine plateau, we extract so much as relates to the famous mountain-hunter, Meshack Browning and his descendants-who mainly composed the hunting party-their skill as marksmen, and to a trial of the shooting qualities of the best rifles used by the bear hunters when pitted against the rifls of Doctor Maynard. The account is from the pen of a gentleman who once had much celebrity as a hunter in the West, and who had renewed the wood sports of his early life after many years spent in literary pursuits.

"I cannot close without telling you that my mountain companions were as noble and sensible fellows as it has ever been my fortune to meet. They were all Roman centurions in their forms and presence, and an army of such, with a Washington or a Jackson to lead, could hold the despotisms of the world in awe, and an oligarchy at home that would sever the Union and overthrow the liberties of the people. They were, for the mest part, descendants of Meshack Browning, now the octogenarian chief of the bear bunters of the mountains, where his infancy, manhood, and old age have been spent. He has the look of one born to command in the midst of the Allegbanies. No man ever had a head so much like General Jack oa's--the same prominent, firm-set chin, resolved lip, Roman nose, with something of the refinement of the Greek, beaming eyes-sometimes expressing themselves in lightning, sometimes in the soft radiance of the rainbow made of tears. He has the same thin, elevated, furrowed forehead, crowned with a crest of thick, gray bair, lifted like the roused eagle's.

"This venerable man, who has been a hunter all his life, and made his living and portioned off his offspring, now amounting to 122, with mountain freeholds acquired by his gun, may well be considered the patriarch of this region. He has always been looked upon, although an illiterate man, as the foremost among the people for sound sense, integrity, heroic courage, kindness, generosity, and courtesy. Although he never had more than six months' schooling, he writes a strong, legible hand, and has a native elequence and talent for conversation which makes all willing listeners, no matter who compose the company. His friends have persuaded him to write the incidents and adventures of his life. It may well be entitled 'The Life of a Hunter.' For the greater | art of a century, and amidst the wildest and grandest scenes of our country, he has been one of the highest and most romantic caste.

"I read as much of his story in manuscript as my active pursuit of the same er joyments in the same region would permit, and was charmed to perceive that enough remained of the original grandeur of the wilderness and of the luxuriance and beauty of the creation, animate and inanimate, that belongs to it, to verify the graphic descriptions of his pages, and justify the enthusiasm that impelled so much genius in the career of a hunter. His parration is given with all the simplicity of Robinson Crusoe, but it has the advantage of a vividness and strength of expression and of spirit, supported by the attendant circumstances recounted, that dis-tinguishes reality from fiction. The story of the exploits of the hunter, Cummings, among the unwieldy game of Africa, although it the unwieldy game of Africa, although it attains verismilitude in the same way, has not equal interest for me. Cummings is a military tactician and scholar, and does his work like a disciplinarian turned hunter .--Our Sachem of the Mountains is a naturalborn hunter, educated solely in Nature's own school, and gifted, by Nature, to tell her Story eloquently and truly. "But, from the school of military tactics, I suprised this hero of hunters (who may be said to have conquered the Alleghanies with the old long rifle) by the display of a little polished 20-inch gun, as easily wielded as a pistol, which he and the whole tribe of hunters, after repeated experiments, were obliged to confess excelled all the rifles they had ever seen. It was the breech-loading, selfpriming rifle, invented by Dr. Maynard, a gentleman who probably had his mind turned to the improvement of weapons by his military studies at West Point. "At Haye'e, near the Virginia line, where a goodly company were assembled, and examining Maynard's gun with mingled curionity and distrust, and some derision, I modestly proposed a shooting match. A hundred and fourteen yards were stepped off as a pretty good test for a bunting gun. Some half dozen rifles of the best repute were tried against the por-gun, and all were beaten --The surveyor of the county made his experiments with it, which proved equally honorable for himself and the gun. Then some of the best shots among the buntamen tried with equal success and self-congratulation. The little gun became a favorite. Subsequently on the other side of the valley, near the Pennsylvania line, where we had an accession of comrades, another trial was made with Maypard's against the mountain gun, shooting the distance of 232 yards. In this experiment the little gun was always close into &c., &c. the mark; the others nowhere -a sharp-shooting machinist and eager hunter would test the thing with a rest for both himself and gun, and nearly drive the centre. "A fine marksman, who had a Harper's Ferry rifle of great celebrity, resolved to try both from his own shoulder. The little gun cut the paper; the big one missed the tree .--The surveyor of the county tried his hand ngain, and keen eyes with it, and made a line shot just above the paper. On this the great bear-killer declared he never in his long life had seen any rifle equal to Maynard's. He lamented that he had not such a weapon in his early days; it would have been so admirable, by its quick leading, for his hand-to-hand fights with the bear in defence of his dog in the laurel thickets, and for long shots from mountain to mountain over the precipitous gorges which divide them along the Savage river. It only wanted, he said, the bair-trigger and a little addition to its length, to poise it at arm's length, to make the piece perfect."

The charter of this Company offers more favorable advantages to the farmer and others, than any other company chartered in the State. by insuring with or without a premium note .-If the applicant prefer, he can pay the full amount of the premium in cash, or by effecting a cash insurance for two years, the insured saves one-eighth of the amount he would otherwise have to pay: or by becoming a member, and giving a small premium note, the insured saves nearly one half of the amount charged by Stock Compa-

the advantage resulting from the combination of THE CASH AND MUTUAL PRINCIPLE. This company commenced issuing Policies against loss or damage by fire, on the 16th of March, 1854, since which time over five thousand seven hundred persons have insured and become members of the Company, and over thirty thousand dollars have been paid for losses .-Having trebled our business during the past year, we feel grateful for the liberal patronage bestowed upon the Company thus far, and for its flattering prospects of future usefulness. The Directors hope and believe that by prudence, caution and a rigid system of economy, they will establish for this Company a reputation for cheapness and safety, not surpassed by any Company in the U. States. All differences in settlement of losses, may be determined by three disinterested arbitrators of the County where such loss happened, to be mutually chosen by the insured and the Company.
